Lost Lagoon boasts a crystal-clear lake that mirrors the surrounding landscape, creating a breathtaking reflection of the tranquility that awaits. Serpentine pathways wind their way through the dense foliage, inviting you to wander and lose yourself in nature's embrace. Each step you take reveals a new marvel – from vibrant flora to gentle cascading waterfalls, Lost Lagoon is a paradise for the senses.

Lost In Thought: A Journey Within

While Lost Lagoon's physical beauty is undoubtedly captivating, its true essence lies in the introspective journey it facilitates. The peaceful ambiance encourages visitors to pause, reflect, and connect with their inner selves. Here, you can silence the noise within and fully immerse yourself in mindful contemplation.

The stillness of Lost Lagoon provides the ideal setting for self-reflection and deep thought. Whether you choose to sit by the water's edge and listen to the soothing sounds of nature or find solace in one of the many secluded spots, the serenity of the surroundings will help you find clarity and inner peace.

Unlocking Your Creativity in Lost Lagoon

Alongside self-reflection, Lost Lagoon ignites the spark of creativity within visitors. The vibrant colors of the flora, the symphony of bird songs, and the gentle rustling of leaves serve as muses for artists, writers, and dreamers alike.

Bring along a sketchbook or journal and let Lost Lagoon inspire your creativity. As you sit beneath the shade of towering trees, allow the whispers of the wind to guide your pen or brush. Explore the depths of imagination and unlock new realms of artistic expression.

A Digital Detox: Disconnect to Reconnect

In a world dominated by screens, Lost Lagoon offers a much-needed break from technology and the fast-paced demands of daily life. Here, you can disconnect from the digital world and reconnect with nature, yourself, and those around you.

Unplug and let Lost Lagoon be your sanctuary. Engage in meaningful conversations with fellow explorers, create precious memories with loved ones, or simply revel in uninterrupted solitude. Leave behind the noise of notifications and notifications and immerse yourself in the symphony of nature's soundtrack.

Getting Lost to Find Yourself

Lost Lagoon's allure lies in its ability to transport you into a world different from your own. As you wander through the labyrinth of pathways, you may find that you not only rediscover Lost Lagoon but also yourself.

Allow the journey to unfold naturally, embracing the unexpected encounters and revelations along the way. In this serene oasis, you have the freedom to lose yourself – and in doing so, you may just find the answers you seek, the inspiration you crave, or the peace your soul longs for.

Lost Lagoon: A Place to Return to

Once you've experienced the enchantment of Lost Lagoon, it becomes a place you yearn to return to. Its serene beauty, transformative energies, and captivating aura leave an indelible mark on your heart, calling you back again and again.

Make Lost Lagoon a part of your journey and let it guide you through life's twists and turns. Whether you seek solace, inspiration, or clarity, Lost Lagoon will always be there, ready to welcome you with open arms and the promise of a transformative experience.

In trademark lyric prose, accompanied by the images depicting the sights and sounds of nature, Warland's roving observations in and around Vancouver's Lost Lagoon offer insights into nature, narratives, and the urban environment.

After moving to Vancouver's West End in 2014, The Human is drawn to a small body of water called Lost Lagoon in Stanley Park. Daytime visits, with a surprising array of wildlife, are quietly revelatory; but so is suddenly waking in the night when owl hoots, or geese startle in alarm at otter on the prowl. The Human savours this up-close relationship between wildlife and fast-paced urban living, questioning the interface between the urban and natural world.

Upon learning the lagoon was named by nineteenth century Canadian author E. Pauline Johnson, of Mohawk and English origin, Johnson then becomes a presence in the narrative. Pauline Johnson wrote evocatively about it: “Among the wild rice in the still lagoon/In monotone the lizard shrills his tune.”

During five years of intimate counterpoint between urban living and wildlife, The Human’s notions are challenged and altered. Questions of how significant the specificity of place is to story, how our relationship to nature is altered by urban living, and how we might return to the natural world. Reminiscent of Henry Thoreau’s Walden Pond, perceptions about nurturing, fear, inventiveness, delight, death, protection, humour, even tenderness change as the lagoon has exposed what being human in the twenty-first century actually means.
