The Law of Assumption

Central to Neville Goddard's teachings is the concept of the Law of Assumption. According to Goddard, whatever we assume to be true, and persist in that assumption, will eventually manifest in our reality. In other words, if we truly believe in something and live as if it has already happened, it will become a reality sooner or later.

However, Goddard emphasizes that mere wishful thinking or positive affirmations are not enough. To manifest our desires, we must truly feel the reality of our assumptions. This means engaging all our senses and living in the state of the wish fulfilled. By doing so, we align ourselves with our desired reality and attract the necessary circumstances to bring it into existence.

Imagination Creates Reality

Neville Goddard believed that imagination has the power to create our reality. He argued that everything we see around us was once imagined. Our external world is a reflection of our internal state. By consciously using our imagination, we can mold our reality and bring forth our desired experiences.

Goddard encouraged his followers to spend time in quiet contemplation, vividly imagining their desires as if they have already manifested. He believed that by regularly entering this state, individuals can impress their subconscious mind and activate the creative powers within. It is in this state of deep concentration and emotional involvement that the seeds of manifestation are planted.

Techniques for Manifestation

Neville Goddard outlined several techniques to aid in the manifestation process. One of the most popular techniques is known as "The Pruning Shears of Revision." This technique involves revisiting past events or conversations and reimagining them in a more desirable manner. By mentally revising the past, Goddard believed we could alter our present reality and shape a more positive future.

Another technique emphasized by Goddard is the use of vivid mental imagery accompanied by intense emotions. By vividly imagining our desires and engaging our emotions, we align ourselves with the frequency of our desires, thus attracting them into our reality. Goddard often referred to this technique as "living in the end," as it involves living as if our desires have already come true.

Belief and Persistence

In Neville Goddard's teachings, belief and persistence play a crucial role in the manifestation process. Without unwavering belief in our desired outcome, our efforts to manifest may falter. Goddard encourages us to cultivate a deep sense of faith in our own creative power and to persist in our assumptions, even when faced with apparent obstacles or setbacks.

Neville Goddard's teachings on the power of belief and imagination offer a fascinating perspective on manifestation. By believing in and persisting in our assumptions, we can align ourselves with our desires and bring them into fruition. It is through the conscious use of our imagination that we unlock the secrets of our own creative power. So, go ahead, and embrace the teachings of Neville Goddard. Manifest your dreams by simply believing it in!

The last year that Robert Frost was with us, he was interviewed by Life Magazine and said: "Our founding fathers did not believe in the future, they believed it in." This is true. Having broken with England, our founding fathers could have established their own royalty here by making one of them the king, thereby perpetuating a royal family. They could have chosen a form of dictatorship, but they agreed to imagine a form of government that had not been tried since the days of the Greeks. Democracy is the most difficult form of government in the world, yet our founding fathers agreed to believe it in. They knew it would take place, because they knew the power of belief - the power I hope to show you that you are, tonight.
