Lion city, the garden city, the red dot, Singapura.....Singapore has been referred to by many names. It is the world's only island city-state. From being a trading post of the East India Company to being a global commerce, finance, and transport hub, Singapore has come a long way. The country's transition from a third world status to what it is today, in only 50 years, has been remarkable.

Overwhelmed by Singapore's success story and pace of growth, I decided to venture into the heart of this city to capture the spirit of Singapore, which is visible through its people, iconic landmarks, history and aspects of everyday life.

Inspired by the cultural diversity of the country, I decided to make a coffee table containing the pictures that I took during my attempt to capture the essence of Singapore. I have decided to name my project, "Hues of Singapore". So here I present, Singapore through my lens.
